D'Emery's great sensational melodrama, "A Celebrated Case," will be produced next New York Block Barket. eck at Berzog's Sinth Street Opera-House with that tragic and thrilling actor, Mr. Bennett Matlack as Jone Renows, the con-Bernielt Mithack as Jose Remond, the con-demning galley slave. "A Colebrated Case" is a drama repliete with highly semational situations. The plot is concise and excit-ing, the minds of Joseph wife in the pro-logue creating a deep interest at the outset, which is never allowed to flag during the remaining live acts. The character of Joseph Remont much resembles that of Joseph Voljoan in Victor Hugo's famous novel, "Les Miserables." To follow the life of a French galley slave is pathetic and interesting, Mr. Matlack comes supported by a strong com-pany, including Miss Stella Rees, a taleoted actress. "The Parlor Match." The comedians Evans and Hoey will be seen in this langhable play for the first time in this city. "The Parlor Match" is certainly one of the funniest pieces put on the stage. Mr. Hoyt seems to have a faculty for presenting ludicrons elimations possessed by no other dramatic writer. All of his pieces have proved to be successes. The humor of "The Parlor Match" is one of the furiously faccical kind—not the drollery that makes one smile, but the rattling, fresh and vigorous fun where every point tells and where every set is greeted with shouts of laughter. The two central figures in this merry melange are I. McCorley, a "literary man" and Old Hoes, a collector for an anciton room—the parts played respectively by Mr. Chiengo Markets.
